AFL Bares Soviet's Harsh Labor Rules

By ARNOLD BEICHMAN
New York Correspondent of AFL News Service

The International Confederation of Free Trade Unions is submitting to the United Nations Economic and Social Council a document bearing the name of George D. Brown, Soviet labor leader, which contains a list of 100 demands for the Soviet Union.

A report of these violations, based on Soviet publications and documents submitted in Geneva, Switzerland, by Miss Tina Dreyer, ICFU representative, to the U.N. Commission on Human Rights, is the latest edition of the ICFU report on the basis of their investigation.

The report just received here by the AFL News Service is a mass of information—well documented, well planned and well written—on the slave trade unions in the Soviet Union.

Trade unions in the Soviet Union have no voice in the making of laws, no voice in the making of wages and working conditions, and no voice in the making of the labor contract.

Since then, wages in the USSR have been determined by Soviet government agencies.

AFL Leaders Ask President For "Fair" Defense Controls

Green, Meany, Bates Urge Price Controls At Key Party

Washington—AFL leaders gave President Truman a specific program for fair economic controls in the defense emergency at a White House conference today.

They indicated that the President should demand for "quality of control" in the defense industry. The President, himself, had made it clear in a letter to Vice President Barkley that he expected special-interest groups to be the center of the battle.

While Meany-Bates conference was taking place, the President was in the White House with the cabinet.

He recommended immediate price controls to help price producers of defense goods.

Mr. Meany, Meany, Bates and Green, however, after the conference, the AFL leaders are prepared to give the same as the American Federation of Labor.

Mr. Bates, chairman of the AFL's Housing Committee, called for the AFL Executive Council to take action on the housing program.

Truman Declares America, Faced With Defense Crisis, "Can Count Upon Labor"

By HARRY S. TRUMAN, President of the United States

We have good reason for special observation of this Labor Day. It should be a day of thanksgiving for past accomplishments and present opportunity. But it should also be a day of determination to the tasks that lie ahead of us. This year, especially, Labor Day emphasizes our facing forward as a nation in the hour of our life.

It is appropriate on this Labor Day—as on this great holiday in the past—that we pay tribute to the tremendous achievements of our American labor. Each year since the end of World War II we have had increasing cause to celebrate the record the working men and women of this country enjoy high wages, good working and living standards, and great opportunities. They are partners in living democracy today, more than ever before, they are a vital force in every section of our public life.

It is the purpose of the United States in the world today to bring about conditions of peace under which working men and women of this country can achieve better lives, and participate in the affairs of their own nations. We know that to reach this goal will require sustained hard work, by every one in our country and in all the free countries.

One of the greatest dangers in the way is the communist movement, which lately professes to be the friend of those who have just won freedom, but which threatens the free nations with aggression. In the face of this threat, we must stand united in our determination to maintain peace. We and our free nations, acting through the United Nations, must stand united in our determination to maintain peace.

We believe that a world at peace contains boundless possibilities for growth and progress for all men everywhere. But the outcome is not alone ours to determine. Until there is concrete evidence that the aggressors are willing to have peace, we must build sufficient defense. I know that American working men and women, as good citizens, stand ready to carry their share of the support this will require.

I know that as President of the United States I can count upon the support and patriotic devotion of labor in my effort to bring about a just and enduring peace in the world—a peace that will mean even greater rewards not only for our own workers but for workers everywhere.

Eric Johnston Urges U. S. Appoint Unionists to UN to Deal With Malik

Washington—Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, today urged the United States to appoint unionists to the United Nations to deal with the Soviet Union's demand for the removal of the American labor movement.

Johnston said that the American labor movement is the only force in the world that can stand up to the Soviet Union's demand for the removal of the American labor movement.
